HEADQUARTERS BULLETIN.

Commander-in-Chief Warner Banqueted.

A banquet was tendered Gen. Warner in Kansas But this memory I cling to and love the best-City, Mo., by Thomas Post on April 4. There were 106 Grand Army comrades present, among them | For when wounded I lay on the outer slope, Commander J. S. Phelps, Col. W. F. Cloud, of Topeka; Col. J. B. Johnson, of Topeka; Col. Michael Boland, and others. The first toast, "Our Guest, Msj. William Warner, Commander in Chief of the Grand Army of the Republic," was responded to

Here in my own country, in my home, in the house of my friends, in your partiality you have done me honor o'er much. When such complimentary things are said of one who is known, where he has spent the years of his manhood, it sets him to seriously thinking whether there are those so credulous as to believe them: it is but natural that he should hope that there may be believers, but conscious of his own shortcomings, his fears break the wings of his hope. Yet I assure you friendship, as warm and generous as it is unseifish and disinterested, a friendship not the growth of a year, but the fruit of an intimate acquaintance friendship that has been stronger in the storm of of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh," apt words, for my heart is full to overflowing with gratitude-yet there are times when the heart is too full for utterance; then silence is golden.

Mr. Chairman, the American volunteer gained the admiration of the world no more for his courage in battle than for his maguanimity in victory. He never sank the citizen in the soldier. The European soldier, it is said, "moves like a machine" tine American volunteer "not only moved like a machine, but the machine thought." Grant voiced the sentiments of the brave men in the ranks as much when he said, "Let them take their horses with them, they will need them for Spring plowing," as he did on the field of battle in the memorable words: "No terms except unconditional and immediate surrender can be accepted. I propose to move immediately upon your works." The The following circular letter has been issued by NEW YORK.— American citizen is characterized by his conserva- U. S. Grant Post, No. 95, Ouida; was fired upon the union of the States endangered be took up arms with a profound conviction that inveterate, and now, as it were, inborn reverence for the law"; it was this that made him the thinking machine, the model soldier of history. He folowed the flag of his country, the emblem of law, the emblem of National authority, without murmur and with more confidence than did the children of Israel follow the pillar of cloud by day and of fire by night. The war ended-contrary to the history of the civil wars of the past-clothed with all power, the American volunteer did not threaten the liberties of his country; he passed in review in the Capital of the Nation; the soldier disappeared, the citizen remained, with an increased love for the Union and a deeper reverence for the Constitution. The deeds of these men shall go down in song and story which shall be sung and told by a liby-loving people in ages to come. They by their trials, sufferings and death gave to this Nation "a new birth of freedom" and preserved to us and our children "a Government of the people, by the people and for the people." It would be strange, indeed, if the survivors of that army should not be bound together by the most endearing ties of comradeship. The reason for this comradeship has been uptly described in prose and verse by General and private, THES OF WAR.

The greatest of living soldiers, -our comrade, William T. Sherman,-he who "made a thoroughfare for freedom and her train 60 miles in latitude, 200 to the main," said in a recent article; "Chil dree reared under the same roof learn to know and love each other, but a day, a week, a year of war comradeship in the same company begets a knowledge of character impossible elsewhere." He then adds: "In civil life we must accept a man at his own word; not so in war; the truth is then revenied, as it were, by the lightning's flash; in the twinkling of an eye we segregate the true from the false, the brave from the timid, the earnest Private Miles O'Rellly says of the fraternal feeling the commdeship developed by army life: There are bonds of all sorts in this world of ours, Fetters of friendship and ties of flowers, And true lover's knots, I ween. The boy and the giri are bound by a kiss, But there's never a bond, old friend, like this— We have drunk from the same canteen.

What we Know of Color. [American Lithographer.]

All that we know of color, its causes and effects, is in connection with the wave theory of light. Color depends upon the number of light waves reflected from any object impinging upon the retina of the eye. In red there are about 40,000 waves to the inch, and these will strike the eye at the rate of 447 millions of millions of pulsations per second. In violet there are 57,-000 waves to the inch, and 690 millions of millions of pulsations per second. The other colors have wave lights intermediate between these two. Color does not, therefore, exist either in the object or in the brain or the mind of the observer. It is an effect. There can be no appearance of a fire on a desert island where three is no eye within seeing distance. The chemical process called combustion goes on, but there is no appearance of the flame save when its waves strike upon the retina of an
